Answer: A

QUESTION: 5

A company wants to create a new drop-down list that an operator can use when creating new dynamic network views. The list will hold the customerName and customerLocation information. This information was collected during the discovery phase and added to the model. The administrator has already extended the NCIM database with a new table called Customer which has two fields: customerName and customerLocation. The model has been configured to populate this new table. Which additional step does the administrator need to take to display the new table in the dropdown list?

- A. add this table to the appropriate section in the topoviz.properties
- B. modify the ncimMetaData.xml file by adding the appropriate table and data fields
- C. modify the DBEntityDetails.cfg file by specifying a new drop-down list and the name of the table created in the NCIM database
- D. no additional step is required as the network view configuration automatically has access to all of the tables in the NCIM database and will create a drop-down list for each and every table

Answer: B
