QUESTION: 1

Which of the following test techniques can detect defects in the requirements specification at the earliest possible time?

- A. Inspection
- B. Performance testing
- C. Equivalence partitioning
- D. Unit testing

Answer: A

QUESTION: 2

You are designing tests for an integrated system that will use three off-the-shelf components to manage a bank's accounts-receivable system. You have been given a state transition diagram from the business analysts that shows the sequence of states an invoice moves through from generation to ultimate payment or laic thereof. You have also been given a design document from the system architects that shows which tables are used to store various portions of the invoice and its related information. You intend to create a set of end-to-end tests that cover all major use cases and work-flows associated with processing invoices. Which of the following is the best solution to the oracle problem for this test?

- A. Use only the state transition diagram as the oracle, since this should be a black-box test.
- B. Use only the design document as the oracle, since this should be a white-box test.
- C. Use both the design document and the state transition diagram as oracles.
- D. Use neither document as an oracle, but rely entirely on your understanding of the system.

Answer: C

QUESTION: 3

Which of the following is a black-box (behavioral) test design technique discussed in BS 7925/2?

- A. Classification trees
- B. Orthogonal arrays
- C. Statement coverage
- D. State transition diagrams

- C. It requires the use of pair programming and pair testing
- D. It defines inspections, walkthroughs, and technical reviews

Answer: D

QUESTION: 6

Which of the following statements are correct?

- I. IEEE 1028 is an international standard on reviews.
- II. Early reviews are very cost effective in finding defects.
- III. Review is considered a static testing
- IV. All types of documents can be reviewed (source code, requirements document, test plan document)

- A. I, II and III true
- B. I, III and IV true
- C. I, II, III and IV true
- D. II, III and IV true

Answer: C

QUESTION: 7

You are testing a product for which you will receive few if any, specification documents. The usual approach to development is to get an idea and start building something, letting the idea evolve as it proceeds, while writing very little down. You decide to use exploratory testing as a primary testing technique. Which of the following statements is true about your test condition document or documents?

- A. It will have three levels. The first level will be classic quality risks, the second will be level failure modes, and the third level will be the effects of those failure modes.
- B. It will have three levels. The first level will be ISO 9126 quality characteristics, the second level will be ISO 9126 sub characteristics, and the third level will be quality risk items.
- C. It will have two levels. The first level will be user requirements and the second level will be system requirements.
- D. It will have one level. It will be a set of test charters, where each charter states the test objectives to be covered and gives some ideas about how to test those objectives.

Answer: D
