Question: 1
What is the limit of a Stretch MetroCluster?

A - 300m with 2G disk shelves
B - 600m with 1G disk shelves
C - 30Km
D - 100Km

Answer: A

Question: 2
To set a maximum transfer rate for all transfers leaving a source (primary) system, you need to see:

A - options replication.throttle.enable on
B - options replication.throttle.enable on and options replication.throttle.outgoing.max_<kbs value>
C - options replication.throttle.enable off and options replicationthrottle incoming .max_<kbs value>
D - snapmirror off; options replication .throttle.outgoing.max <kbs value>; options snapmirror on

Answer: B

Question: 3
Which one of the following steps is incorrect for the Semi-Synchronous Snapmirror data flow?

A - Writes come in and are written to the source filer's NVRAM.
B - Write is acknowledged after waiting on the outstanding interval time to expire - depending on the outstanding interval this will be limited how out of sync the two sites are.
C - NVlog blocks are transferred to the destination filer's NVRAM.
D - The destination filer responds with an ACK.

Answer: B

Question: 4
What is an RPO in the context of disaster recovery?

A - Recovery Point Objective
B - Risk Profile Objective
C - Retrieval Point Outsourced

D - Runs Per Over

Question: 5
A customer wants to dynamically adjust the SnapMirror transfer rate. They issue a snapmirror throttle command on the source system. What happens?

A - Nothing. The snapmirror throttle command needs to be issued on the destination storage system
B - The changed transfer rate will only apply to the current transfer. The next scheduled transfer will use the maximum transfer rate that is specified in the /etc/snapmirror.conf file
C - The changed transfer rate will apply to all future transfers until you change it back using another snapmirror throttle command
D - The current transfer immediately applies the new value

Question: 6
You have been asked to setup a SnapMirror transfer from an existing volume at the primary site to a secondary system 320Km (200Miles) away. The volume currently has 7Th data, but it has very low change and growth rates, so the available link between the sites of 1Mbit/sec is considered acceptable for the updates. Which one of these methods is not suitable to achieve the initial (baseline) transfer:

A - Transfer the data across the link, but ensure that transfers only take place during out of office hours
B - Use SnapMirror to transfer the data to a volume on other disk shelves in the primary filer, and then move the disk shelves to the secondary site by road
C - Use SnapMirror to transfer the data to a volume on disk shelves in another filer at the primary site, and then move the disk shelves to the secondary site by road
D - Create tapes using SnapMirror and ship these to the remote destination by FedEx. The data can then be read back onto the secondary system

Question: 7
When deciding if Synchronous mirroring is possible between two sites, which of these metrics would you use to get the most accurate value?

A - Measure the distance between the sites on a map
B - Measure the length of cable/fibre connecting the two sites
C - Measure the transfer rate of asynchronous SnapMirror between the sites
D - Measure the round trip time for packets sent between the sites

Question: 8
A customer has a 128Kb link out to a remote office. They would like to speed the baseline transfer for their volume SnapMirror. Which one of the following approach is the best one?

A - LREP to a portable device (e.g. tape)
B - Increase the TCP window size
C - Increase the number of drives in the root volume
D - SnapMirror to tape
