- B. They are encrypted binary files.
- C. They can be used to pass data out of Staffware.
- D. Each line contains a # denoting the end of the line.
- E. Each line contains a field name and value, separated by a comma.

Answer: C,E

QUESTION 2

A procedure needs to integrate to a third-party system via a Messaging solution but also needs the ability to manually perform the integration as a fallback. Which statement is true?

- A. Event steps are best used in this situation because events can pass data out to an external interface and receive data back via manual intervention.
- B. Brokers are best used in this situation because they integrate seamlessly to a Messaging solution and process workitems delivered to a workqueue.
- C. EAI steps are best used in this situation because they are truly transactional in relation to the iProcess Server and integrate seamlessly to a Messaging solution.
- D. EAI steps are best used in this situation because they are truly transactional in relation to the business process and they allow manual intervention because they are delivered to a user queue before processing.

Answer: B

QUESTION 3

Which two statements are true? (Choose two.)

- A. Workitems processed by a broker do not post entries into the audit trail.
- B. A broker program could write extra tailored audit postings that can contain case data.
- C. EAI step audit postings can be tailored so that the audit record can contain case data.
- D. EAI step audit postings can be suppressed entirely by configuring the "Over-ride Audit settings" flag.

Answer: B,C

QUESTION 5

Each process and sub-process has an Auto-Purge status flag, which can be set manually by a developer or administrator. What happens if this flag is checked for a sub-process, but is not checked for its parent process?

- A. The sub-process is closed when it completes. It sets a flag to show that it is now purgeable. The administrator can then manually purge the sub-case.
- B. The sub-process is closed when it completes and shows in the parent audit trail as "closed." It then purges automatically when its parent process is completed.
- C. The sub-process is automatically purged as soon as that sub-process completes, deleting its audit trail. The parent's audit trail shows the sub-process as complete with no details available.
- D. When you save the sub-process definition it automatically alters the status flag on the sub-process so that it matches the status flag on its parent process. They must both have the same setting.

Answer: C

QUESTION 6
