QUESTION: 1

A system is being planned with three production partitions, one each for an IBM i, AIX standard edition, and Power Linux applications. One fibre-channel attached TS3100 tape library will be shared between the partitions for backup. Which solution provides tape library sharing with minimum operator intervention?

- A. Configure VIO Server Express Edition to control the tape library through one fibre channel card. Assign the library to the production partitions when needed.
- B. Configure the IBM i partition to own the tape library. Use IBM i virtualization to host a virtual tape library connection to the AIX and Linux partition. Assign the library to the production partitions when needed.
- C. Configure a fibre channel card for each partition, and a configure fibre switch. Connect the partitions and tape library to the switch. Zone the switch so all partitions can enable the tape when needed and disable the tape when finished.
- D. Configure AIX to control the tape library through one fibre channel adapter. Use AIX virtualization to host a virtual tape library connection to the IBM i and Linux partitions. Assign the library to the production partitions when needed.
